Boxing in No Need of the Vigilance Committee the International Sporting Club Pro-

Contright, 1000, by The Prove Publishing Co., (The New York Evening World.) OR once we are at variance with the ideas of the International Sporting Club. We can't subscribe to its announced plan of applicating a vigilance committee to look after the welfare of boxing. We althor vigilance committees on general principles. They appeal to us like the boxing committees anyhow? Only soft-constituted meddlers who so more harm than good at anything. ore vigilance committees anyhow? Only self-constituted meddlers who so more harm than good at anything they tackle. Gov. Smith will ellority appoint a Boxing Commission, and if can't handle the sport and safe-guard it without the assistance of vigilance committees, the good old game of fluturifs is in a bad way. Empowered by the provisions of the Walker Boxing Bill, the commission can aurround itself with capable assistants who doubtless will be qualified to know the difference between right and wrong in the administering find to know the difference between right and wrong in the administering of the law. Busybody vigilants would only gum up the situation and develop into an overlapping influence which would soon have everybody consected with boxing at loggerheads. Hoxing is not a burgiarious busibees. Nor is it the pursuit of crooks and highbinders. The mere suggestion that a vigilance committee is necessary to see that it is kept on a high plane, of itself casts a stigma on high plane, of itself casts a stigma on the sport before it actually is legal-ted. Why suspect wrongdoing in is a fine organization, composed of some 2,000 members, among them some of our biggest and most folid citizens. It is a welcome addition to our country's sporting institutions, but it shouldn't constitute itself as the guardian angel over boxing and its sidelights. No one can pretend that the manly game is one of heavenly invention. Far from it. Good and bad go to make it up, as all kinds of people makejup a world, but we venture to say there is no more dishonesty in its conduct than might be found in various other businesses. The International Sporting Club should keep its hands off the control lever and let Gov. Smith's commission run the engine. is a fine organization, composed

OOKS as if the favorites are in for an inning or two at Aqueduct now. They haven't been coming down in front as often as they should, and the players were beginning to feel the effects of shrunken bank rolls. Yesterday seemed like an ice breaker. Four choices scored, and to-day's programme promises some more, but one can never tell.

Faunus was the opening choice home to win on the post from Polly Ann. Then came Lion d'Or, who was nearly forced out of the favorite's position by the confident backing Timedentorm received. Lion d'Or, however, won, as favorites should, with plenty to spare. An upset came in the third, when Elected II., at a false price, in view of his last good race behind Marie Miller, just gailoped home in front of the choice Hubidium. Giadiator was the third choice to score, but he was more or less lukewarm. A big play on Fair Gain all but scared everybody away from the winner. Sea Mint, after a senson of successive disappointments. season of successive disappointments, from the winner. Sea Mint, after a season of successive disappointments, brought home the bacon in the fifth. He, too, was a confidently played favorite. In the last event, Leatherface, if he wasn't actually favorite, should have been. He led practically all the way, to win with little contention. The day's doings, all took were profitable to the players.

Every once in a while there is a queer-looking race run at the race tracks. Yeaterday there was one. It was that won by Sea Mint. No queerness was attached to him, but Torch-bearer's showing was entirely at variance with anything he has shown in a long time. Naturally a quick beginner, he usually is off in front to do or die there, depending on the distance he is travelling. On everything he has shown this season, one looked for him to be in front at some stage of the mile journey. He wasn't, however, at any part of the race. Instead he was rushed behind Sea Mint after the latter got off winging, and then was taken back. Sande made a second and a third run with him, but got nowhere. He saved ground at the head of the siretch, but profited little by this plain advantage. When Sande tried to send him along on the rail he simply wouldn't be sent. The race was as different from Torchbearer's last showing as day is from night. It is just possible that Sande bearer's last showing as day is from night. It is just possible that Sande had instructions to "place" the horse and reserve his well known speed for the stretch. If so, the horse must have tired under restraint. He fin-ished outside the money in a field of five, a disgraceful exhibition, to say the least.

Billy Hogan is one trainer who doesn't need a big string of horses with which to win races. Hogan can take hold of a single horse, fit and train him, and win at the asking. He did this with Lion d'Or, and then sold him for $20,000. He accomplished the same with another one-horse stable yesterday, when he sent Faunus to the post in the opening two-year-old race. "Til about win this race," Hogan' told everybody. He didn't put any ifs, ands or buts in the information. Faunus won and like a good one. After being away from the post badly, the coit buts in the information. Faunus won and like a good one. After being away from the post badly, the colt came from behind and was up in time to hip Polly Ann on the post. Hogan is to sail for Ireland on July 15, and we will miss him, his pipe and his Irish smile. He is going over to attend the Dublin Horse Show and has been commissioned to be some has been commissioned to buy some horses at the sale there. Hogan knows horses and may be depended on to bring back something worth while.
